Dwayne K. Barlow
President & CEO
The BarTech Group

You can say he has Electricity running through his veins and it has sparked a multi-million-dollar business. Dwayne K. Barlow, started his career in the Utility industry in 1984 as a Meter Reader for ComEd - an Exelon Company. With more than 36 years of progressive experience he is now at the helm of one of a few African American-owned Electrical Construction Contracting firms, whose core business is focused on Security related to Critical Infrastructure Protection. The BarTech Group is a MBE/DBE certified electrical contractor based in the Midwest. With its low voltage electrical and fencing divisions, The BarTech Group performs a vast amount of projects in the transmission and substation space. "Team BarTech" has grown from 7 employees in 2014 to 100+ employees currently. Over this same period of time The BarTech Group has increased its revenue by approximately 10 times.

While recognized for its "Best in Class" Safety Performance, The BarTech Group has senior leadership with more than 270 years of collective utility industry experience in transmission and distribution. The BarTech Group is uniquely positioned for continued growth and success in fencing and low voltage electrical, whether it's in a utility substation or an office building. The BarTech Group has performed safely on such jobs as the CTA Redline Track Renewal and 95th Street Terminal Projects; the Illinois Tollway (I-90) Sign Project; the ComEd Quality Control Program, and the ComEd Physical Security & Electronic Security Perimeter Program, as well as several Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) projects.

Leading the BarTech Group with Passion, Purpose, Perseverance and Commitment, Barlow's fundamental belief is that "Successful leaders have learned the mastery of anticipating business patterns, finding opportunities in pressure situations, serving the people they lead, and overcoming hardships." This has been the driving force behind his business philosophy throughout his career, and has contributed to his continued growth and success as a minority business owner.
