Stefanie Garcia is the Co-Owner of FlanBoyan Corporation. FlanBoyan is an e-commerce flan company that specializes in 20 flavors of flan with residential home deliveries and retail partnerships. She is responsible for the company's ongoing expansion efforts.

In her previous role with Water Integrated Treatment Systems, she served as Executive Vice President of Operations. Stefanie was responsible for the project management of the building of two wastewater treatment facilities that expanded the company in Illinois and Wisconsin. She oversaw the day-to-day operations of multiple departments and mentored and directed management teams to structure departments for growth.

Before joining Water Integrated Treatment Systems, Stefanie was a Program Manager for the Chicago Minority Supplier Development Council (Chicago MSDC). As the program manager, the devotion she had for furthering minority enterprises gave her a creative edge into establishing innovative new programs. She created the PIPE Program in partnership with the University of Phoenix that focused on capacity building for established Minority-owned companies. In addition, Stefanie was also responsible for the management of an Illinois Tollway Technical Assistance Center. A center focused on advancing construction companies with business consulting, financing and other key areas where assistance was needed.

While at the Chicago Minority Supplier Development Council, she previously enjoyed being a part of the Chicago MBDA center team as a procurement consultant. The Chicago MBDA center team assisted clients in 2016 with awarded contracts in excess of $75 million. The center allowed her to deepen her analytical skills as the established companies came from different industries such as construction, manufacturing, food and others.

She was named DiversityMBA Magazine's 2017 Top 100 under 50. She also received the Impact and leadership in government and economic empowerment for Women Businesses by the Quad County Urban League.

Stefanie holds an MBA from Northeastern Illinois University.
